HOME TOWN HEARS JONES' PLEA FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Highest Tribute to Character of Local Candidate In Democratic Primary

"When the sun goes down and the moon comes up, Mattison will shine!"

These encouraging words, sung with enthusiasm by the many staunch supporters of Attorney Mattison B. Jones of 1901 Kenneth road, voiced their approval of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Highest tribute to the character of Mr. Jones was paid by all speakers at last night's meeting in the Glendale Union High school auditorium.

Will Hays of Los Angeles, president of the Democratic Club of Southern California and campaign manager of Mr. Jones, explained the difficulty he had in convincing Mr. Jones that it was his duty to run for office.

"It is a pleasure to me to come to Glendale, Mr. Jones' home, where I know it isn't necessary to make any explanations for our candidate," remarked Mr. Hays. "It isn't necessary to make excuses anywhere in California for Mr. Jones.

Sees Great Opportunity

"This year of all other years in the past 20 years that I have known the state we have an excellent opportunity of electing a Democratic candidate.

According to Mr. Hays, the suggestion that Mr. Jones should be the Democratic nominee for governor came first from Col. Tom Thornton of 900 East Randolph street, who made this recommendation at a session of the Glendale Democratic club.

"After all is said and done, the politicians of this state are the lawyers," remarked Mr. Hays, commenting on the fact that Mr. Jones took advantage to meet many of the Democratic lawyers recently in San Francisco at the convention of the California Bar association.

"My opinion was, and I haven't had any reason to change it, that Mattison B. Jones will be nominated, as they say in Kentucky horse racing, 'hands down,'" asserted Mr. Hays with enthusiasm. "The question being asked all over this state is: Who is Mat-

City Mgr. Reeves Entertains O. R. Angelillo, Inventor Of Magic Olindoscope

What is an "olindoscope?" You do not know, probably, but O. R. Angelillo, its inventor, who was visiting last evening with Captain W. H. Reeves, city manager, does—and he is keeping its innermost workings secret.

For the "olindoscope," as he calls the machine, penetrates fogs—and the United States navy, in April of this year, accepted it and the science accompanying its operation for the nominal consideration of one dollar. Maybe Mr. Angelillo will be able to realize more by capitalizing a stock company to exploit his invention.

The inventor also states he was the engineer on the "Agawam," the first fabricated steel ship to be built by the United States during the war.

Tells Story of Invention

But that is beside the story of the greater achievement in giving the maritime world a machine which increases the visual penetrability of fog from 1000 feet to five miles. An almost magic trick resulting from a series of experiments that nearly upset several former theories regarding, sight, light waves, etc., and brought two separate schools of science to the common ground of both being right!

In 1913 Mr. Angelillo, as a student, started on a quest to determine the relation between the fish eye and the human eye, as the former was known to possess faculties uncommon to man. This is how he claims to have discovered certain phenomena which had been puzzling two schools on the theory of light, one school believing in the wave theory, the other the Newtonian corpuscular hypothesis.

"Both Theories Correct"

His research showed that certain regions of the lower spectrum responded to some forms of matter while the upper spectrum responded differently, so each region has separate qualities. All of which led to Mr. Angelillo's reported successful attempt, by mechanical means, to use a timing process for synchronizing the wave length and frequency so the sight would

C. OF C. MEETING PLANS PUZZLING

Curiosity Aroused by the Inviting of Committees From Organizations

Deep-dyed mysery surrounds preparations for the first autumn forum meeting of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, scheduled to be held in the form of a noonday luncheon gathering, Tuesday, September 5.

There's something in the air, but nobody except Secretary James M. Rhoades sems to know just what it is, and he refuses to talk about it now. President V. M. Hollister is admittedly in on the secret which is responsible for the invitation issued to each of the civic organizations of Glendale to be represented at the meeting by a strong committee of five for the consideration of a problem of utmost import to the community.

Prominent Speaker Coming

Judge Rex B. Goodcell, collector of internal revenue, as widely known for his impressive commonsense talks as for his judicial record, is to be the principal speaker on the program. Otherwise, however, oratory on this occasion will be curtailed, as there are many important subjects which may be brought up by the membership or officers—never forgetting the mystery which requires the participation of special committees from all civic organizations of the city.

Glendale Party Has Outing at Big Bear

Big Bear Lake district was the scene of a delightful outing outing enjoyed by a group of Glendale people who left here a week ago and returned last Sunday night. The party consisted of the Misses Helen Godar, Florence Marlow, Geraldine Aust, and Messrs. Robert Godar and Albert Psenner.

The party drove first to Bartlett's camp at the lake, where they were accommodated at Brownie court. Horseback riding, hiking, and "ocean trips" on the lake furnished the principal pastime.

BIG CROWD SEES LIFESAVERS IN ACTION HERE

Municipal Pool Thronged at Exhibition Rescues Put Over by Boy Scouts

More than 700 persons last night crowded about the municipal swimming pool in Patterson Avenue park to witness the exhibition of lifesaving and of prevention of water accidents as demonstrated by Fred H. Killick and a number of Boy Scouts of Glendale.

Seats for 250 had been provided and were filled early. Standing room was all taken and boys climbed to the roof of the bath house. Parking space for automobiles was all taken and those cars from which the pool could be seen were filled with people.

"It was the most successful public event which the Boy Scouts of this district have ever held," stated Scout Executive Harold F. Benner this morning.

Pool Is Sanitary

L. R. James, superintendenet of the pool, made a short address in which he invited the public to make use of the plunge. He mentioned the many improvements and conveniences, stating that the pool is cleansed and purified three times a week, and no chemicals are used in the water, which might have possible injurious effect on the bathers. A nurse is in constant attendance, and nobody with disease or carrying germs in his throat is permitted to enter the water.

Roy L. Kent, secretary of the Verdugo Hills district, B. S. A., made the address of welcome. He complimented the management of the pool for its fine condition, and for the co-operation shown Mr. Killick and the Boy Scouts in making the evening's program a success.

Demonstrations Hold Interest

Mr. Killick, who is a recognized authority in his lifesaving work, held the interest of the gathering during his entire list of demonstrations, lasting over an hour. Before his swimming demonstration, he showed how a suspension bridge may be made with rope and blankets, to be stretched across a body of water or a canyon.

MUNICIPAL POOL DISCARDS TUBES

Glendale Official Certain That 'Safety Doughnuts' Are Unsafe Device

"The safety swimming tubes were discarded Monday, August 7, at the Glendale municipal swimming pool," said L. R. James this morning in discussing a statement made in a Monday edition of a Los Angeles paper proclaiming that Hermosa Beach bath-house was the first place on the Pacific coast where the tubes had been condemned.

"We might just as well get the credit," said Mr. James, "for immediately after I became supervisor of the municipal pool I realized the danger of accident from the tubes. We had already had two accidents caused by the tubes and I could see that there would be many more.

"The tubes resemble the inner tube of an automobile tire and are filled with air. They are very popular with people who cannot swim and therein lies the danger. A person using one of the tubes puts it over his head and down under his arm pits. The tube then holds him up in the water. But the danger lies in having older boys pull the tubes away from the younger and less experienced children or in having people who cannot swim get in deep water and become hysterical and let go of the tube.

"Glendale municipal pool was the first place to discard the tubes and I am anxious that we should get credit fo rtaking the initial step."

Civil War Vets In Reunion at Beach

A large delegation of Glendale G. A. R. and W. R. C. members are in attendance at the Huntington Beach encampment. One of the features yesterday was a courtmartial for the purpose of "trying liars and knockers and toot out bootleggers."

In the afternoon the veterans were taken on a trip through the oil fields and the Los Angeles post and corps furnished the entertainment in the evening.

Today is "Bean Day," the Relief corps serving a bean dinner followed by a mock dress parade and vaudeville show.

The annual election of officers will be held tomorrow.

One of the features of the encampment is the collection of Civil war trophies, including old drums, flags captured from Confederates, uniforms worn by slain Southern officers and countless other relics.

APHASIA VICTIM'S WIFE APPEALS FOR SEARCH

Ex-Patrolman C. B. Anthony Again Missing Result of Army Injury

It was ten weeks ago on June 11 that Charles B. Anthony, formerly a patrolman on the Glendale police force, left his wife and three children at the I. L. Bullock home at 517 West Park avenue and started for a two-day trip to San Diego, and since that time nothing has been heard of him and his wife and relatives are convinced that he has suffered a recurrent attack of aphasia.

The Anthony family came to Glendale about a year ago from Elsinore and according to Mrs. Anthony her husband has had six previous attacks of aphasia, resulting from a severe injury to his head received several years ago when he was serving with the regular army. In addition to this injury he was also victim of an intense sunstroke, which augmented the severity of his mental trouble.

Attacks Recurrent

It seems that Mr. Anthony always seeks out of the way and quiet places when suffering an attack and his relatives are hoping that they may find him safely located in some town or smaller city of Southern California. The last time he left home was seven years ago, when an attack seized him and he was away seven weeks. He suffered another attack three years ago, but did not leave his home, where he was confined to his bed three months.

Just previous to leaving Glendale in June Mr. Anthony was arranging to go into the cement business. His wife says that he had talked for some time of the urgency of the trip to San Diego, but that she later found that there was no reason for his going to the southern city. When he left Glendale he went to Los Angeles, where he met and talked to friends, who say he was still intent on going to San Diego. After he was absent a few days Mrs. Anthony enlisted the help of the police but as yet no trace has been found of the missing man.

Description of Man

Mrs. Anthony has given the following information, which she hopes may lead to finding her husband: Traveling in a Saxon, 1916 model, license number 670662; personal description, 37 years old, height, 6 feet 1 inch; weight, 215 pounds, brown hair streaked with gray, partially bald, mole on lower left side of chin.

That Mr. Anthony has not disposed of his automobile is certain because Mrs. Anthony had communicated with the license bureau at Sacramento and there is no record of a change. In her search she has also enlisted the aid of members of the Odd Fellows' lodge, of which her husband is a member.

Glendale Dogs Have Their Day At Kennel Show

Glendale was prominent in the recent kennel show at Pasadena because of the entry and recognition accorded blooded dogs owned by Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Dell of 324 West Myrtle street, and Mr. and Mrs. Allen N. Fairchild of 1036 Boynton street.

Armed with a splendid pedigree, the Dell's dog, Glenelg of Anoakia, a product of Anita Baldwin's Anoakia kennels, took two first ribbons and one second. Glenelg of Anoakia is an Airedale terrier and eight months old. He took first in the puppy-dog class for animals between six and nine months' old. He also took first ribbon in the entries of Pacific-coast-bred dogs. His second-class ribbon was won in the novice class.

The Fairchilds' dogs are Scotch terriers and their Champion El Calidad Meg of Kilda won the silver medal in the special class, while Wee McGregor was cited as a reserve winner.

Large Attendance At Weekly Lunch

The regular weekly noonday luncheon-meeting of the Glendale Merchants' Credit association, held yesterday noon, drew a large attendance of members, who liberally applauded the financial report on the community picnic held under the auspices of the association last Wednesday. The fact that no losses were incurred other than the voluntary subscriptions already pledged and collected, was welcome news.

The chairmen of all committees connected with the picnic were given votes of appreciation and acclaim, and it was ordered that a letter of appreciation be sent to The Evening News because of the publicity accorded the occasion.

A discussion of the advisability of having all merchants close on special occasions, like that of the picnic, resulted in the appointment of a committee to take up the subject with some firms which kept open their Glendale stores last Wednesday.

LINEBERGER GIVES ACCOUNTING TO CONSTITUENCY

Congressman Emphasizes Stand for America First In World Dealings

Congressman Walter F. Lineberger last night answered for his stewardship of the Ninth California district at the national capital at an informal reception and dinner tendered him by about 200 Republicans of this community at the Broadway Inn.

Attorney W. E. Evans, chairman of the ninth district campaign committee and Postmaster D. Ripley Jackson shared honors in receiving the many friends of the congressman and the former presided.

"America first" was the keynote of Mr. Lineberger's address, although he dwelt heavily on local matters of importance, the duties of a congressman and the respectful request that he be re-elected to further carry on the program of the Republican administration.

"America for Americans"

John Hyde Braly, in the prime response of the evening, pointed proudly to the fact that the present congressman "certainly is a nationalist and not an internationalist."

"I stand here as one proclaiming America for Americans," said the venerable man of affairs who was born in 1835, before the first steamship had wiggled its way across the Atlantic ocean.

"Why I was born before the bathtub came into use," he said in his whimsical way. "The doctors jumped all over the fellow who invented it and presented it at the Philadelphia exposition. In Massachusetts they passed a law that a person should not take a bath from the last of November to the first of March without a physician's certificate."

Many Others Speak

Mrs. Braly also spoke, as did City Manager W. H. Reeves, C. W. Ingledue, John Robert White, James M. Rhoades, Attorney Albert D. Pearce, Volney Craig of San Fernando and J. C. Sherer.

Mrs. Lineberger followed her husband's enlightening talk on the duties of a congressman by telling tison B. Jones? Lots of people don't know him because when they know him they will vote for

COSTLY THEATRE TO BE ERECTED

New Tremaine Hotel Edifice Will Include $100,000 Amusement House

Glendale is to have a $100,000 theatre!

This fact has developed in connection with the final plans for the new hotel on the corner of Glendale avenue and Broadway.

Fred A. Miller, secretary of the Miller Amusement company and manager of the California theatre at 812 South Main street, Los Angeles, will lease the new theatre as soon as it is built, accordng to report.

Although the advisability of including a theatre in the construction of the hotel has been debated for some time it was not decided upon definitely until recently. It is being fostered by H. J. Tremaine, who will ultimately own the hotel, and the local bondholders will have nothing to do with the enterprise beyond approving its inclusion in the plans.

Entrance on Glendale Avenue

After some discussion as to whether the theatre should face Glendale avenue or Broadway, it is believed that Glendale avenue will be favored on account of the larger frontage available there. In this case it will have a frontage of sixty feet on Glendale avenue and a depth of 130 feet.

The seating capacity of the theatre will be 1154 patrons. There will be one balcony.

While the theatre will be designed principally for moving picture shows, the stage will be equipped for stock presentations.

The hotel deal was scheduled to go into escrow for the last time this morning at the Security bank in Los Angeles.

Boy Breaks Bones In Fall From Wheel

A hard fall from his bicycle Saturday afternoon resulted in Herbert Lamb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Lamb of 605 East Myrtle street, breaking two bones of his right arm. The fractures are just below the elbow.

Immediately after the accident the boy was taken to the offices of Dr. C. M. Taylor, who examined the injured arm and set the bones. An x-ray taken yesterday showed the bones in good condition and not requiring resetting.

be given a common cylical coterminous with polarizing action at the wave front.

The olindoscope, which, he claims, performs this remarkable feat, is fifty-three inches in diameter and ten feet, six inches long, a good sized hogshead, as a barrel maker might say. According to the inventor it has been proved and now is in the possession of the United States navy for perfection and use on warships.

Mr. Angelillo has come to southern California for a short stay and expects to enter the contracting business here, although he will return to his home in Newark, N. J., within the next ten days to settle his affairs there, for he feels that Los Angeles is the city of opportunity.

During his brief visit in the southland he has been a guest of several scientific organizations and is greatly interested in the work of the Los Angeles city planning commission. Incidentally, he is greatly enamored with Glendale and may make his future home here.

ADMIRAL'S DAUGHTER HURT

BIRNEY, Mont., Aug. 22.—Miss Sybil Fletcher, daughter of Admiral Fletcher of the United States navy, was expected today to recover from injuries received when she was thrown from a bucking broncho at the Arnold "Dude" ranch near here. BUILDING BOOMS IN EAGLE ROCK WITH HIGH RECORD

Dull Week Is Followed by Renewed Activity In Construction

Projected building operations in Eagle Rock took a jump yesterday when nine building permits were issued at Eagle Rock city hall, with a total valuation of $12,800. This is the largest number and valuation for a week.

Streeet numbers in Sagamore Park have not yet been assigned, but the location is designated as Lot 14, Block 9. The building will cost about $3,500.

Pierson Builds Home

O. P. Pierson, who lives at the corner of Sycamore and Satsuma streets, is also to build a five-room house. It will be built on the rear of the property and will be numbered 510 South Satsuma. The estimated cost of the building is $1,800.

Home for Smiley

A five-room residence is planned to be built for H. W. Smiley at 201 East Sycamore avenue. It is understood that the structure, the construction of which will be superintended by Mr. Smiley, will cost about $3,000.

A temporary residence is to be built for J. W. Reilly of 323 East Hill avenue. The location for the building, which will cost about $750, is on Floristan at Park avenue.

A screen porch is to be added to the residence of Frances Kist at 319 West Sycamore avenue at a cost of about $75.

Mrs. Cora McLeod of 155 South Sierra Vista is to have a two-room temporary addition to be built on to her present residence at a cost of about $200.

LEADER WARNS STRIKERS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 22.—"Put your trust in God, but keep your powder dry."

This warning to the 65,000 striking railroad machinists of the union not to place too much hope in the present negotiations looking toward the end of the railroad strike, but be prepared to "put forth every effort to gain a victory," was embodied in a circular letter from William H. Johnston, international president of the machinists in the mails today.

At the same time Johnston warned strikers and sympathizers against any demonstrations that could be enlarged to turn against the strikers the tide of public sentiment now obviously in their favor. Talk of the government taking over the roads he termed "moonshine bluster."

COMMENT

THAT'S ALL

Let Us War On Weeds
Help Postmen's Picnic!
How Candidates Stand
In the Good Old Days

By Gil A. Cowan

WEEDS 15 feet high on Central avenue. Such is the assertion of a resident who reads Comment and asks the writer to say something about it.

"They—the weeds—bring down the price of property," says the reader, "and also are a blot on the landscape."

Everybody agrees that weeds are a disgrace, but what is the remedy? The publisher of the News resides on Central avenue. Adjoining his home was a vacant lot, held at a high price, that was producing nothing but weeds. The owner consented to the use of the rear of the property if the weeds were removed. It was a bargain 'struck.

No doubt others could do likewise. During the war everybody farmed the vacant property near their homes. Does peace modify ambition that badly?

Well, then, let us have war on weeds!

The mail carrier who brought in a little notice about buying tickets for the postmen's picnic August 26 sold us one without the asking.

The notice said you should ask the carrier for a ticket without his asking you. We bit for four bits and are darned glad of it, for if there is anything we like to do better than anything else is to respond to a request that is not made.

So when you see the mail man passing by tomorrow, ask him for a picnic ticket which entitles you to free refreshments next Saturday at the new Verdugo park.

Even though you do not expect to attend, see to it that this picnic succeeds in appreciation of the service rendered you by the faithful servants of Uncle Sam's postoffice here.

Remember, buy a ticket without being asked. The carriers are too busy to canvass, but there is no one who would deny them the half-dollar's worth of fun to be gotten out of one little slip of cardboard.

By the close of this week primary politics will have reached boiling point in California.

Far be it from the writer to know all of the candidates, but for a large part they are high-minded men who seek public office.

Anyone who can withstand the withering fire of publicity in a hectic campaign such as now is being waged on all sides "must be a mighty good man to do that."

One week from today the die will be cast by the various parties and, if we were betting, it would be safe to say that Hiram Johnson will lead his opponent in the senatorial race by upwards of 200,000.

Richardson and Stephens will provide the real Republican event in placing for governor.

Pearson has the Democratic senatorial field free, while Jones and Woolwine will find it difficult to defeat the other.

Locally speaking there are two sure bets, Lineberger for congress and Weller for representative. Franklin D. Mather and A. Burlinghame Johnson are evenly paired, it would seem, on state senatorial possibilities.

As for the various other candidates for offices such as sheriff, judgeships, committees, etc., a great deal depends on the personal following of the man in question.

If you want to see your favorite win, folks, get out and vote. It is your privilege to nominate the candidates.

Here is an article clipped from an Illinois paper that will appeal to those who have fond recollection of "the good old days."

Mark Twain describes in his autobiography, which Harper's prints, a typical southwestern country store where you could not only buy things cheap, but also get something for nothing with almost every purchase. The time was twenty years before the Civil War.

My uncle's store, says the author, was a very small establishment with a few rolls of "bit" calicoes on a half a dozen shelves, a few barrels of salt mackerel, coffee and New Orleans sugar behind the counter, stacks of brooms, shovels, axes, hoes, rakes and such things here and there, and a lot of cheap hats, bonnets and tinware strung on strings and suspended from the wall. At the other end of the room was another counter with bags of shot on it, a cheese or two and a keg of powder; in front of it were a row of nail kegs and a few pigs of lead; and behind it was a barrel or two of New Orleans molasses and native corn whisky on tap. If a boy bought five or ten cents' worth of anything he was entitled to half a handful of sugar from the barrel; if a woman bought a few yards of calico, she was entitled to a spool of thread in addition to the usual free "trimmin's"; if a man bought anything in the way of groceries or hardware, he was at liberty to draw and swallow as big a drink of whisky as he wanted.

Everything was cheap; apples, peaches, sweet potatoes, irish potatoes and corn were ten cents a bushel; chickens were ten cents apiece; butter was six cents a pound; eggs were three cents a dozen; coffee and sugar were five cents a pound, and whisky was ten cents a gallon.

MOTOR TOURISTS BOOST GLENDALE

Carry Banners on Cars In Fifteen Hundred Mile Trip Through State

"A Buick is better'n a Nash!"

"No, a Nash is better'n a Buick!"

However, that may be M. B. Towman, who drove a Nash, and Ray Galvin, who drove a Buick, are back from a 1500-mile auto trip and the puzzle is likely to remain forever unsolved so far as they are concerned. Anyway both cars are admittedly top-notchers.

The itinerary included Lancaster, Hojave, Bishop, Mammoth lake, Mono lake, over Tioga Pass to Yosemite, through the Wawona grove of Big Trees to San Francisco and then back the coast route.

One car bore a legend: "Glendale, the fastest-growing city in America," and the other car, "Glendale, the city of homes." As a result this community was well advertised en route.

If you want to get a laugh from Ray Galvin, who happens to be star salesman for Tanner and Hall at 237 South Brand boulevard, just mention "blow-out." That term seems to be indelibly fixed in his mind with Yosemite. However, he says that the expense of the trip was remarkably small.

The party included Mr. and Mrs. Ray Galvin of 1344 North Columbus avenue and their son, Jack, and Mrs. A. Enos, proprietor of the Victor hotel; Mrs. H. C. Perks of San Francisco, Mrs. J. D. Tripp of 1315 South Central avenue, and Miss Doris Tripp of Amsterdam, New York, and M. B. Towman.

American Women Make Big Hit With Deanville Beaux

DEAUVILE, France, Aug. 22.—This is the American woman's year in the fashionable gambling casino at Deauville. In the play, particularly on Sunday night, the women outnumber the men, 3 to 1.

European men delight in crowding round the tables where American women are playing, their curiosity apparently never satisfied as to the psychology of the American women.

King Alfonso of Spain, who is sojourning here, on more than one occasion has watched American women at play, strolling over from the tables reserved for visiting royalty.

The continental male shows by his approving glances that he has a gallant feeling for the energy, independence and daring of the American girls as they stake large sums on the turn of a card. The American women seem to differ from those of other nationalities in that they never lose their poise no matter how much money they may lose.

Staggs, Alva E. Smith (the "boy banker") and C. E. Funnell, all charged with violating the Oklahoma banking laws and wanted in connection with the failure of the First State Bank of Clarita, Okla.

Moose Abundant In Illinois This Week

AURORA, Ill., Aug. 22. — Ten thousand Moose are encamped in tents at Moose Heart and hundreds more are coming in with every train for the 34th annual convention of the Loyal Order of Moose, which opened this morning.

President Harding is expected Friday to dedicate the James Davis memorial. Exercises preceding the convention include the initiation of the Harding class of 1,000 candidates.

The Pennsylvania baby village, the Ohio plaza, the Wisconsin, New Jersey and Indiana buildings will be dedcated tomorrow.

Insect Armies Are Invading Clinton

CLINTON, Ill. — Millions of white ants are threatening the destruction of many houses here.

Professor J. W. Finley, of the biological department of the University of Illinois, superintended the applications of poisonous chemicals to exterminate the ants. The termites have been killed in several houses, but another concerted attack by the powerful ants will be repelled by more doses of poison.

The homes of C. T. Sprague and C. F. Weld were overrun by the insects. Weld's fine new house was almost alive with the insects. Even oak floors as well as softer wood were honeycombed by the pests.

YELLOW MEN, GOLD PROVIDE THRILLS

Glendale Offers Gouverneur Morris Story in Film Last Times Today

Those who love adventure stories, thrilling pursuits on land and on sea, fights between strong men, enmities between women, sacrifices on the altar of affection, in their screen entertainment, cannot afford to miss the latest Goldwyn picture, "Yellow Men and Gold," by Gouverneur Morris. This photodrama is now being shown at the Glendale Theatre, where it will remain for this afternoon and evening only.

Interest never lags in this picture. Events happen too quickly and too vigorously to let the blood cool. Scarcely has the hero or the heroine overcome the obstacle of one melodramatic situation when he or she is confronted with another. It is a conflict between relentless villains and doughty heroes, a homeric struggle that takes many forms and ranges over a quarter of the earth's surface.

Other numbers on the bill are equally interesting.

Can't Keep Fords Out of Show, Even

Jesse Smith, Glendale Ford auto and Fordson tractor agent, is enthusiastically for the Pageant of Progress to be staged in Los Angeles, opening next Saturday. The reason for Mr. Smith's interest is the fact that the Fordson Industrial Tractor show comprises an interesting and important part of the pageant.

The Fordson show has been put on in many expositions, and is improved in interest and attraction with each occasion. Fifty displays of the uses, industrial and agricultural, of the Fordson tractor will be shown.

WAR VETERANS IN SOLID BLOCK FOR SEN. JOHNSON

Ex-Service Men of All Ages Are Enthusiastically In Favor of Hiram

Hiram Johnson for senator is backed by the great majority of ex-service men, according to Miss Eva Daniels at the Johnson-for-Senator headquarters in Glendale. Miss Daniels states that not only the World War veterans but also the Spanish war and Civil war patriarchs are in the majority "strong for" the progressive senator's re-election.

"Daily, world war veterans—including some sprinkling of disabled men—come in to tell us how Senator Johnson has aided them or some buddy of theirs," Miss Daniels states. "Their indignation is profound over the unfounded assertions of Johnson's opponents that Hiram has not worked for the interests of veterans in need."

A world war veteran added the following explanation:

"The organization of our Johnson supporters into small local bodies of an informal nature is one of the bright spots of the political situation insofar as Johnson is concerned. The vets have taken up Hiram's fight for their own, not only because he has been friendly to us but because Johnson's record is of that progressive positiveness that appeals to men in the prime of life whose vision has not yet become befogged with ultra-conservativeness nor beclouded by fuddled dreams of bygone hopes unfulfilled.

Does Caddy Work? Law Must Answer

LONDON—Is caddying employment or pleasure?

This is the problem that the ministry of labor must solve. Under the laws providing for unemployment doles, employers are forced to pay a certain amount in unemployment insurance every week. The question has now arisen whether golf clubs should be forced to pay unemployment insurance for caddies, and it is to be determined whether caddying is employment.

'BONDED WOMAN' AT T. D. L. TODAY

Debt of Gratitude and Love Feature Story Starring Betty Compson

Bonded by a debt of gratitude and love—such is virtually the meaning of the unusual title of "The Bonded Woman," Betty Compson's latest Paramount picture at the T. D. & L. Theatre today.

Albert Shelby LePino wrote this play for the screen from a story by the late John Fleming Wilson. There are virtually two leading men, played by John Bowers and Richard Dix. The one is a rough but big-hearted first mate, with a craving for drink; the other, a ship owner, polished and a man of the highest character.

When the mate saves the life of Angela's father (Angela being the role interpreted by Miss Compson) she feels an intense debt of gratitude. Later this ripens into love; but when he is accused of theft, she believes that he is unworthy of her. Also, he is a drunkard. The other man loves her and she promises to wed him, but at the last moment realizes that only with the first man can happiness lie, and goes in search of him.

To Probe 'Foreign' Schools In Hawaii

HONOLULU.—A federal investigation of the public school system of the territory of Hawaii will be made in the near future to determine whether or not the "foreign language" schools now conducted here for children of alien races shall be permitted to continue in operation, according to word received from John J. Tigert, federal commissioner of education.

Tigert will come to Hawaii during the fall to make a careful study of conditions. There are about 150 of the schools, with a total enrollment of over 40,000. Leading Japanese citizens of the territory may be asked to show cause why the Japanese schools should be allowed to continue.

The RIDDLE of the FROZEN FLAME

by M.E. & T.W. HANSHEW

Copyright, 1920 by Doubleday, Page & Company.

Cleek got to his feet slowly, and strode over to the window. In the gathering gloom of the early winter night, the flames were flashing out one by one, here and there and everywhere hanging low against the grass across the bar of horizon directly in front of them. Cleek stared at them for a long time. Mr. Narkom coming up behind him peered out over his shoulder, rubbed his eyes, looked again and gave a hasty "God bless my soul!" of genuine astonishment, then dropped into silence again, his eyes upon Cleek's face. Sir Nigel, too, was watching that face, his own nervous, a trifle distraught.

But Cleek stood there at the window with his hands in his trousers' pockets, humming a little tune and watching this amazing phenomenon which a whole village had believed to be witchcraft, as though the thing surprised him not one whit; as though, in fact, he was a trifle amused at it. Which indeed he was.

Finally he swung round upon his heels and looked at each of the faces in turn, his own broadening into a grin, his eyes expressng incredulity, wonderment, and lastly mirth. At length he spoke:

"Gad!" he ejaculated with a little whistle of astonishment. "You mean to tell me that a whole township has been hanging by the heels, so to speak, upon as ridiculously easy an affair as that?" He jerked his thumb outward toward the flames and threw back his head with a laugh. "Where is your 'general knowledge' which you learnt at school, man? Didn't they teach you any? What amazes me most is that there are others—forgive me—equally as ignorant. Want to know what those flames are, eh?"

"Well, rather!"

"Well, well, just to think that you've actually been losing sleep on it! Shows what asses we human being are, doesn't it? No offense meant, of course. As for you, Mr. Narkom—or Mr. Gregory Lake, as I must remember to call you for the good of the cause—I'm ashamed of you, I am indeed! You ought to know better, a man of your years!"

"But the flames, Cleek, the flames!" There was a tension in Merriton's voice that spoke of nerves near to the breaking point. Instantly Cleek was serious. He reached out a hand and laid it upon the young man's shoulder. Merriton was trembling, but he steadied under the grip, just as it was meant that he should.

"See here," Cleek said, bluntly, "you oughtn't to work yourself up into such a state. It's not good for you; you'll go all to pieces one of these days. Those flames, eh? Why I thought any one knew enough about natural phenomena to answer that question. But it seems I'm wrong. Those flames are nothing more nor less than marsh gas, Sir Nigel, evolved from the decomposition of vegetation, and therefore only found in swampy regions such as this. Whew! and to think that here is a community that has been bowing down to these things as symbols from another world!"

"Marsh gas, Mr.——"

"Headland, please. It is wiser, and will help better to remember when the necessity arises," returned Cleek, with a smile. "Yes, that is all they are—the outcome of marsh grass."

"But what is marsh gas, Mr.—Headland?" Merriton's voice was still strained.

Cleek motioned to a chair.

"Better sit down to it, my young friend," he said, gently. "Because, to one who isn't interested, it is an extremely dull subject. However, it is better that you should know—as you don't seem to have learnt it at school. Here goes: marsh gas, or methane as it is sometimes called, is the first of the group of hydrocarbons known as paraffins. Whether that conveys anything to you I don't know. But you've asked for knowledge and I mean you shall have it." He smiled again, and Merriton gravely shook his head, while Mr. Narkom, dropping for the time being his air of pompous boredom, became the interested listener in every line of his ample proportions.

"Go on, old chap," he said eagerly.

"Methane," said Cleek, serenely, "is a colorless, absolutely odorless gas, slightly soluble in water.

"It burns with a yellowish flame—which golden tinge you have no doubt noticed in these famous flames of yours—with the production of carbonic acid and water. In the neighborhood of oil wells in America, and also in the Caucasus, if my memory does not fail me, the gas escapes from the earth, and in some districts—particularly in Baku—it has actually been burning for years as sacred fires. A question of atmosphere and education, you see, Sir Nigel."

"Good heavens! Then you mean to say that those beastly things out there are not lit by any human or superhuman agency at all!" exploded Merriton at this juncture. "And that they have nothing whatever to do with the vanishing of Wynne and Collins?"

Cleek shook his head emphatically.

"Pardon me," he said, "but I didn't say that. The first part of the sentence I agree with entirely. Those so-called flames are lit only by the hand of the Infinite. And the Infinite is always mysterious, Sir Nigel. But as to whether they have any bearing upon the disappearances of those two men is a horse of another color. We'll look into that later on. In coal mines marsh gas is considered highly dangerous and the miners call it fire damp. But that is by the way. What enters into the immediate question is the fact that there is a patch of charred grass upon the Fens where you say the vanished man, Dacre Wynn's footprints suddenly ended. Hmm."

He stopped speaking suddenly, and getting up again crossed over to the window.: He stood for a moment looking out of it, his brows drawn down, his face set in the stern lines that betokened concentration of thought.

Mr. Narkom and Merriton watched him with something of wonder in their eyes. To Merriton, at any rate, who really knew so little of Cleek's unique and powerful mind, the fact of a policeman having such extensive information was surprising in the extreme.

"You don't think, then," he said breaking the silence that had fallen upon them, "that this—er—marsh gas could have caused the death of Wynne and Collins? Burnt 'em alive, so to speak?"

Cleek did not move at this question. They merely saw his shoulders twitch as though he did not wish to be bothered at the moment.

"Don't know," he said laconically, "and if that were true, where are the bodies? . . . Gad! Just as I thought! Come here, gentlemen, this may interest you. See that flame there! It's no more natural marsh gas than I am! There's human agency all right, Sir Nigel. There's natural marsh gas and there are—other things as well. Those marsh lights are being augmented. But for what purpose? What reason? That's the thing we've got to find out."

VACUUM TUBES IN TRANSMISSION

Before utilizing vacuum tubes in radio work it would be well for the experimenter to study a few important facts concerning the care of vacuum tubes in order that his pocketbook may be protected, and also that more satisfactory results may be obtained. The following suggestions may be found serviceable:

When placing vacuum tubes in the set or making tube replacements it is important as far as possible to use tubes of similar electron current characteristics in the modulator positions.

It is practically impossible, owing to manufacturing difficulties to make tubes identical in their characteristics, but after manufacture they are tested and inspected and to be acceptable for their various uses the electron current to the plate under certain conditions be within specified limits. In the use of the tubes as modulators the unbalancing due to the slightly different but allowable variation between tubes is quite pronounced. It is therefore recommended in order to insure a maximum value of tube life and a good margin of safety in operation that tubes of similar test constants be used together as modulators whenever possible. Some manufacturers tag or mark their tubes with the particular characteristics of each tube, so that the selection or the grouping of tubes according to their electron current constants can easily be accomplished by reference to the tag. For modulators tubes having preferably similar low values should be used.

In the use of tubes as oscillators the selective grouping of the tubes is not so essential.

If this precaution in regard to the modulator tubes is not observed it will be found that a tube having a higher test figure than the others of the group will indicate a higher current on the individual plate current ammeters and tend to run overloaded.

BAKELITE BASE IMPROVES TUBE MOUNTING

A novel idea in a tube mounting has made its appearance. The standard bakelite base is used and to this is fastened four base studs with rounded head screws. The mounting is accomplished by four upright pins into which the standard four prong tube fits. The advantage in this method is obvious. Greater contact is made with the four prongs and the connections being made firmly they do not work loose. In addition the four pins are fused to prevent the tube from burning out. Base is highly polished and the four connections standard to all tube sockets are engraved on bakelite base.

They Say That

"The greatest of faults," says Carlyle, "is to be conscious of none." No man who has made progress in the world has done so without making mistakes. Errors of judgment and faulty decisions are bound to occur. But progress and success come through learning the lessons that our mistakes teach us. Failure, on the other hand, comes through the repetition of one's errors.

To eliminate mistakes, as the result of the close study of one's personal problems, is efficiency. It is this quality that distinguishes the thrifty man from the man who is thriftless. The latter continues the mistakes of wasting money, time, energies and opportunities. The thrifty man learns in the school of experience that these things mean retrogression. While he makes mistakes, he is personally organized along such lines of efficiency that he is not likely to repeat them. His practices of thrift and self denial have developed will power and character. Therefore, his mistakes become sources of strength. Instead of millstones about his neck he makes them stepping stones to greater accomplishments.

Do not bemoan your mistakes. If you are a young man or young woman standing today on the threshold of life, do not imagine that you will go through the journey without making mistakes or displaying shortcomings. The question of your success or failure in life will not depend on whether you make errors. For you are sure to do this. It will depend on your ability to take advantage of them, to avoid their repetition and utilize them as necessary lessons in the development of character and judgment.

It's A Fact

A Nevada aviator, en route from Buffalo, N. Y., to Nome, Alaska, was forced to land at Niggerhead Flat, on Seven-mile River, 75 miles from Dawson, because of engine trouble. His airplane descended into the midst of a herd of caribou, one of which the aviator killed for food. The plane, partially wrecked, was abandoned, the aviator proceeding by steamer to Fairbanks.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SCARY EYES

In the field, not far from Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow, grew many flowers. Among them were some daisies—white daisies with yellow centers, and another kind called "black eyed Susans" by some, and by others "ox-eyed daisies." These flowers were large, with yellow petals and a center of brown. In fact, they did look like the eyes of an ox, or, perhaps, the eyes of a girl named Susan.

"Well, whatever the flowers are called," thought Uncle Wiggily, as he hopped through the field one day, looking for an adventure, "whatever their name, they are beautiful."

On and on hopped the bunny rabbit gentleman through the field until he came to the woods.

"Here, if anywhere, I shall find an adventure, I think," said Uncle Wiggily to himself. "I wonder what kind it will be?"

As he walked along he stumbled and kicked aside a flat stone, turning it over. And, as it turned over, beneath it the bunny saw many ants scurrying about in the midst of what seemed to be little light brown pills.

"My! How fast you ants are scurrying away!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "What is the matter, and what are those little brown things like pills that you are carrying into those tiny holes in the ground?"

For by this time each ant had grasped one of the queer things and was carrying it underground.

"These are eggs that will hatch out into other ants," explained one of the black creatures. "We carried them up from our home underground to let them lie under the flat stone which was warmed by the sun. But now that the stone is moved, we shall have to look for another."

"All my fault, too!" said the bunny. "I did not mean to, but I overturned your egg-hatching stone. Never mind. I'll place it back where it was at first and you won't have to mvoe your eggs."

This Uncle Wiggily did, and the ants were very thankful to him. Then the bunny hopped on a little farther, and, all of a sudden, looking toward a big fallen log, Uncle Wiggily saw two large scary eyes staring at him.

"Oh, dear me!" thought the bunny. "There's some bad animal behind that log, waiting to nibble my ears! He must be a very savage chap, indeed, to have such large eyes!"

Uncle Wiggily was just going to hop away, thinking perhaps he could reach his bungalow before the bad animal chased him, when all of a sudden, there was some jolly laughter and Sammie and Susie Littletail, the two rabbit children, sprang up from behind the log.

"Oh! My goodness, Sammie and Susie!" cried the bunny gentleman. "Come away from there quickly! The bad animal with the scary eyes may nibble your ears!"

"There isn't any bad animal!" laughed Susie.

"But I saw his eyes—big brownish-yellow staring eyes," said Uncle Wiggily.

"Perhaps it was these you saw!" spoke up Sammie, and he held up a paw full of the yellow daisies he and Susie had gathered from the field.

"Oh, so those flowers were what I took for the scary eyes of some animal!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "Well, I'm glad it turned out this way. Now if you'll come along with me, children, I'll take you to my bungalow. I think Nurse Jane baked some carrot cookies today."

"Oh, goodie!" cried Sammie and Susie, and they walked along, holding paws with Uncle Wiggily. All of a sudden, as they were going through a deep, dark place in the woods, out sprang the Fuzzy Fox, chasing after them and barking:

"I want ears to nibble! I want Uncle Wiggily's ears!"

"Come on, children! Run!" cried the bunny gentleman, and he helped Sammie and Susie to run very fast. For a time they kept ahead of the Fuzzy Fox, but soon the bad chap gained on them.

"Oh, I can't go any farther!" sighed Susie, and she sank down behind a log.

"Let's stay here," suggested Sammie. "And when the Fox comes along, as he will soon, maybe we can frighten him away by using the yellow flowers for scary eyes!"

"A good idea!" said Uncle Wiggily. Down they all crouched behind the log. Uncle Wiggily held up over the top of the log, two of the brown and yellow flowers, spacing them a little way apart, like the eyes of some large animal. And that is what the Fox thought, for, when he came closer he saw the flowers and howled:

Uncle Wiggily saw two large scary eyes.

"Oh, that must be a lion! Oh! I'm afraid of lions; they have such scary eyes! I'll nibble Uncle Wiggily's ears some other day!" And back through the woods ran the Fox. And Sammie and Susie laughed and hugged Uncle Wiggily and twined ox-eyed daisies around his ears. And when the Fox ran past the place where the ants lived, they crawled out and bit him for being so unpleasant toward Uncle Wiggily.

So everything happened for the best, except to the Fox. And if the bread pudding doesn't stay out all night in the rain and have all its raisins washed away, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the brush pile.

Service That Fulfills Promise

He will succeed, for he believes all he says.
—Mirabeau.

Earnestness of purpose is one of the indispensable factors of success. To hold public confidence, one's promises and declarations of policy must be carried out in every business dealing.

In the profession of undertaking, or any other, just as in merchandising, promise of fair dealing and faithful service can bring success only when he who utters it believes all he says, and carries out in action the principles on which he invites patronage.

The L. G. Scovern Co. not only declares for fair dealing, lowest pricing, faithful service, but completely believes in such principles, and carries them out in every day's work. Which is one explanation for Scovern preeminence in its chosen field.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SUSAN IS SHOCKED

Aren't shoes and stockings in this day and generation the most fascinating, the most tempting, and the most astonishingly expensive item in the feminine wardrobe?

That old tongue twister that we used to say ten times in quick succession as a forfeit at the children's parties: "Shoes and socks shock Susan" has suddenly acquired meaning. I never could see why Susan should be shocked at anything so commonplace and necessary. I know now. Susan is a person transported from the old days into ours and she is astonished beyond measure at the diversity of feminine footwear and shocked at the cost of it.

Shoes in the Old Days

Do you remember the old days when shoes were either black or tan, when one had one pair of every day shoes and one of best, with perhaps a pair of white kid slippers for parties and a pair of brown sneakers for sport wear (only we didn't call it sport wear then, we called it for summer vacation).

Do you remember what a rarity a pair of bronze shoes were?

Do you remember when white shoes first came in? I do. (That is almost as bad as admitting that one can remember when people sang "Good-bye, Dolly Grey?" isn't it?). And I remember how I longed for a pair of those white sneakers (the first white shoes were simply white sneakers), and how I went without them because they cost $1.75 and ordinary sneakers only cost about 75 cents.

And as for stockings—do you remember when silk stockings were something of which one had one or two pairs for very best if one were fairly well to do?

An Economical Lady

Out of these days comes Susan and looks into the shoe closet and the stocking drawer of the young woman of average means and do you wonder she is shocked?

In the shoe closet she sees, perhaps, a pair of black pumps and a pair of tan oxfords, a pair of grey suede pumps (the effect of that grey gown would have been ruined without them), silver slippers (being economical this lady makes silver slippers do for all her dressy gowns), a pair of tan and white sneakers, two pairs of white shoes and one of walking boots.

And in the stocking drawer she sees silk stockings of grey, black, tan and white, besides one or two odd colors to match sweaters, and some colored sport stockings.

Husbands Would Like to Know

If someone were there to tell her that the silver slippers cost $12, the grey suede pumps $8, and even the sneakers $2.25, and that not a pair of stockings in that drawer cost less than $1, and some of them $3, she would ask: "Where is all this money coming from?" A question that economists and some husbands would like to know the answer to.

A friend of mine who has just started keeping a clothes budget is astounded at the cost of shoes and stockings. "But what can you do?" she says. "You can't look well dressed no matter how nice your other clothes are unless the shoes and stockings are right."

What indeed, except budget the amount you have a right to spend for clothes and keep within it one way or another? Perhaps one will be better dressed with a gown costing less and the extra spent for shoes and stockings.

And, fortunately, there are always birthdays and Christmases, and a word to a wise family is sufficient.

FLAPPERISM PET AVERSION OF COUNTESS DE GOLIERE, AGED 96

By H. T. HOPKINS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 22.—Dr. Charlotte de Goliere Davenport—the Countess de Goliere—has a pet aversion: The flapper.

"I don't like these modern women," heatedly declared the countess, who is 96 years years old. "With their rolled stockings, bobbed hair and clubs, they are not very admirable. I talked to a club of them here in Portland and I told them they had better be at home cooking and mending for their husbands, and I told them that nobody wants to read the papers they write for their clubs."

Dr. Davenport, who is touring the western part of the United States for her health, formerly was tutor to the empress of Austria. Of her seventeen children some of her sons have been generals in the French army. One of them is said to be the richest man in Brazil.

She Looks Young

Dr. Davenport appears to be a woman of sixty instead of ninety-six. She has a waist measurement of twenty-five inches. She has never known the feel of a corset.

Her advice to young men is: "Don't get married until you can find a woman who is willing to do her share."

And pass up the flapper type!

She had some advice for the reporter: "Eat the right kind of food."

And not to overlook the photographer: "Drink lots of water." Good food, lots of water and hard exercise are her recipes for long and happy life.

"I love young men," said the doctor, and to prove it she called: "Willie! Willie!" The clicking of a typewriter in an adjoining room stopped and a comparatively young man of fifty-one years appeared.

Introduces Husband

"This is my husband," said the countess when she introduced the handsome, black-haired man. He seemed mighty happy to be her third spouse. The first was Count Paszkoff, of Russia, whom she married when she was fifteen. He died a year later. She was wedded three years later to a French colonel. He died when she was thirty-five. Meanwhile she had become an expert fencer, and she went to the empress of Austria as the latter's fencing tutor.

Dr. Davenport came to America forty-four years ago and became very popular in Washington and throughout the east, due to her beauty and accomplishments. Her home now is in Philadelphia.

The countess is very much opposed to being photographed.

Book Reviews

Good things in the way of books are continually being added to the shelves of the Glendale Public Library on Harvard street. Among some of the most recent books which have been offered for general distribution are the following:

"Jim Spurling Millman," by Albert W. Tolman. A story with thrills and a lot of fascinating information about the romantic, as well as the technical side of sawmill life.

"The Romance of Fiddler's Green," a novel by Clara Endicott Sears. A story which depicts one of those strangely quaint romantic episodes such as sometimes happened on New England farms two or three generations ago.

"The Wrong Mr. Wright," by Berta Ruck. This is an amusing surprising and delightfully entertaining story from the first complication right through to the end.

"Married?" by Marjorie Benton Cooke. A novel that the jaded readers will be grateful for.

"The Desert," further studies in natural appearance, by John C. Van Dyke.

"The Evolution of Civilization," by Joseph McCabe. A sketch of civilization from the earliest times.

"Find the Woman," a novel of youth and mystery, by Arthur Somers Roche.

"Beauty and Nick," by Philip Gibbs.

"Red Masquerade" (The Lone Wolf's Daughter), by Louis Joseph Vance.

"The Madonna of the Hills," by Arthur Guy Empey.

"Three Wonderlands of the American West," by Thomas D. Murphy.

"Vitality Supreme," by Bernard MacFadden.

"Wanted, a Husband," a novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams.

"Parsons, On the Rose," a treatise on the propagation, culture and history of the rose.

"Chosen Peoples," the Hebraic Ideal versus the Teutonic, by Israel Zangwill.

"Gardening in California," by William S. Lyon.

"The Shell Book," by Julia Ellen Rogers. A popular guide to a knowledge of the families of living mollusks and an aid to the identification of shells native and foreign.

"Palestine," the rebirth of an ancient nation, by A. Hyamson.

"The Rose," a treatise on the cultivation, history, similar characteristics of the various groups of roses, with accurate descriptions of the varieties now generally grown, by H. E. Ellwanger.

"Electrical Machinery," by Annett.

Beauty Chats by Edna Kent Forbes

ANSWERED LETTERS

Constant Reader—You probably have a very dry skin. The best daily face treatment for you is as follows: Place old soft white muslin, wrung from hot water, over the skin until the pores are open. Massage in a good cold cream, then wash the face thoroughly with hot water and castile soap. Follow this up with a cold rinse or an ice rub. The starch treatment you mention would be a very good one if you had an oily complexion.

Brunette—It is very difficult to bleach a naturally dark complexion. The mild skin bleaches (the cucumber milk and the honey almond cream) sometimes advised in this column are helpful.

Mrs. Smith—It would be wrong for you to take drugs to reduce your weight. Since you are getting fat you must be eating too much. It is natural that you should grow stout this year on the same amount of food which did not produce flesh last year. This is because the operation you went through has improved your health enabling you to derive more nourishment from your food.

John—You probably have a bad habit of twisting your face to one side. You can get rid of this deep line by breaking the habit. Also, massage the face with a good skin food and follow it with an astringent.

Olive—Your symptoms show that your scalp is too dry, which accounts for the hair splitting off. The dandruff, also, comes from this condition. Get some crude oil and rub into the scalp the night before you plan to shampoo the hair. The oil should be well rubbed in, as hot as can be borne, as it will open the pores and be taken up by the skin. Next morning use two complete lathers of castile soap to remove all traces of this treatment. It is also necessary to protect the bed linen or the oil will stain it.

Geraldine—Dance with your girl friends till you are more sure of yourself, or dance alone until you do it better.

Violet—The combination of burning, pimples and dark circles under the eyes make me think you are probably in poor health. Certainly you have impurities in your blood otherwise you would have no pimples at all. The dark circles indicate poor health, nervousness and sometimes a slight internal trouble. In any case it would be best to ask your doctor for a tonic to build you up.

Tomorrow—Shaping the Eyebrows.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So, if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters, M.D.
Author of "Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories"

PAIN AND DISCOMFORT BENEFIT

The trip-hammer is not increased in size by exercise, while the arm of the blacksmith is. Is it because nobody believes that such a result can happen with the trip hammer? No. It is because the trip hammer is made of non-living tissue and the muscle of the blacksmith's arm is made of living tissue.

Take two seeds, kill one by heat or chemicals, plant both of them in the soil. One will take unto itself nutriment from the soil, and it will develop into a thing of living beauty. The other will decay. Why the difference? Is it because we thought this would happen, that one grows and the other decays? No. It is because the one is living matter and it is not in the animals.

In the physiological laboratories, tissues from animals are kept alive, for years, while the animals that furnish the tissues are dead and have been resolved into non-living elements. Is it because the physiologist thinks that the animal must die and the tissue from it must live that it does so? . No. It is because the inherent life principle is still functioning in the tissues and it s not n the animals.

In the living body, the heart beats, the lungs expand and contract, the intestinal muscles work, the glands secrete and excrete, the brain registers impressions through the senses. Why? Because they are living tissue and it is inherent for them to live and to function. Life!

How much of the inherent principle of life and growth can we unconsciously or consciously control? Fortunately, very little. God? Good? Love? Nature? The Unknowable? Whatever it is, let us accept these things.

First—Life and growth is inherent in us.

Second—It is normal for the functions of life to go on unconsciously, painlessly, under the right conditions.

How much of the conditions under which the inherent principle of life and growth function can we consciously or unconsciously control? Fortunately, and unfortunately, a large share.

Just as the seed, to grow, must have the proper environments, so must the various tissues and organs of the body. If there comes a time when through our thoughtlessness or ignorance, or both, the right environment is not furnished—there is not enough nourishment or too much, or not enough guidance or too much—then there is a protest from the tissues and organs.

First, perhaps, discomfort. Then pain, and then a non-performance of their duties. It is the plan of nature to let us know that things are not as they should be, and the organs are striving to obey the law of normality, and to right themselves.

So, then, we must accept pain and discomfort as benefit. We would not do away with them.

We would not do away with them, not until we do away with the errors which cause them. These errors may be physical errors or they may be mental errors. How much is physical and how much is mental of any disorder cannot always be known.

Coue—the French psychologist whose work I discussed yesterday—makes this statement in his book:

"Every illness has two aspects (unless it is exclusively a mental one.) Indeed, on every physical illness a mental one comes and attaches itself.

"If we give to the physical illness the coefficient 1, the mental illness may have the coefficient 1, 2, 10, 20, 50, 100, and more. In many cases this can disappear instantaneously, and if its coefficient is a very high one, 100 for instance, while that of the physical ailment is 1, only this latter is left, a 101st of the total illness; yet there s nothngnyT kjorrd? yt such a thing is called a miracle, and yet there is nothing miraculous about it."

Suppose then, your illness is largely mental, you undoubtedly can help wourself greatly by autosuggestion, and the Coue formula—"Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better"—repeated as he suggests, twenty times, night and morning—will be a good thing for you to try. You need not have a knotted string or Coue rosary, but count on your fingers twice across.

Sour Cream Biscuit—Mix and sift 2 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1-2 teaspoon soda together, then add 1-2 cup sour cream and mix into soft dough. Knead smooth, roll into 1-2 inch sheet, cut and bake 20 minutes in hot oven.

Mock Lobster Salad—To each cup of cold flakes cooked halibut add 2 canned pimentos, drained, dried on a towel and cut into very thin strips. Add an equal measure of celery, which has been carefully scraped and cut into thin slices crosswise, and marinate with French dressing. When ready to serve, drain, mound in salad bowl and mask with mayonnaise. Garnish with curled celery and pieces of pimentoes cut into fancy shapes.

Spoon Bread—Mix 2 cups cornmeal, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder together and add 1 1-2 cups milk, 2 well beaten eggs and 2 tablespoons melted butter or cooking oil, mix lightly and pour into well greased shallow pan, put into hot oven and bake for 25 to 30 minutes.

Pineapple Ice—Boil 2 cups sugar and 4 cups water together 20 minutes; add 2 cups grated pineapple and the juice of 1 lemon. Cool and freeze.

Cheese Loaf—Put 2 cups soft, stale bread crumbs in bowl and pour over them 1 cup of cold milk, let stand 20 minutes; add 1 cup of grated sharp American cheese, add the yolks of 3 eggs and beat until perfectly smooth. Beat the whites of 3 eggs and beat until dry and fold into the mixture. Pour mixture into well greased casserole or pudding dish and bake for from 35 to 40 minutes in a moderate oven. Test as for custard, by putting a silver knife in center; if it comes out dry the loaf is done. Serve at once in a dish in which it is baked.

Italian Sauce—Put 1-2 cup of finely minced onion, 1-2 cup of grated carrot, 1-2 cup of cut turnip, 1-2 cup of cut green pepper and 4 tablespoons butter into frying pan and fry until tender. Add 2 cups of canned tomatoes and 2 teaspoons salt; cook for 5 minutes and mash through a strainer; return to the fire, add two tablespoons flour which has been dissolved in a little cold water; boil for 5 minutes and serve hot.

Frozen Fruit Salad—Take equal portions of bananas, peaches white grapes, halved and seeded, and pineapple, with a few blanched and shredded almonds. The larger fruit should be diced, mixed with the nuts and grapes, and then moistened with the dressing. Mix gently, then place the salad in the can of the ice cream freezer and pack in ice and salt and leave to freeze without turning the crank. The salad must not become solid, but served in the frappe stage. Serve in crisp lettuce cups and garnish with maraschino cherries, whole ripe raspberries or sliced ripe peaches. Serve with Chantilly salad dressing.

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.—Advertisement.

WOMEN TO ENJOY WOODMEN CARD OF BOXING

Five Fast Bouts Promised by Carroll Hare, Who Is Arranging Show

Women are especially invited to the Woodmen boxing contest which is to be staged at the I. O. O. F. hall tomorrow night, according to Carrol L. Hare, who is in charge of the affair.

At the last Woodmen show two weeks ago forty women were present, and seemed to enjoy the bouts as much as the men. Some of them, at least, couldn't be kept away from tomorrow night's affair, according to Mr. Hare.

There will be no substitutions for the principals in the bouts, says the manager, and every event will be run off as scheduled. Last night was the last sparring practise to be indulged in by the fighters before the match, and for this reason the boys will not have an opportunity to get hurt and be forced to withdraw from the event.

All Fighters Primed

Hare visited all the training camps last night, and reports that every one of the boxers is in excellent form and ready for the various fistic arguments scheduled for tomorrow night.

"I think we've got them doped out about right," says Hare. "Every bout on the card is an evenly matched affair, and there is certain to be some snappy boxing when they get started."

Tomorrow's program includes the following bouts:

Howard Kendig of Burbank versus Ralph Myers of Glendale.

Arizona Wildcat of Burbank versus Johnny Myers of Glendale.

Rex Hampton of Burbank versus Kid Essick of Glendale.

Burbank King versus Bill Dunson of Inglewood.

Walter Dodge of Glendale versus Chick Watson of Glendale.

Sport High Spots

With Bert Colima, king of the Pacific coast middleweight boxers, billed to appear in the main event at Vernon tonight, Jack Doyle is again preparing to entertain another capacity crowd at his famous arena. Pitted against Colima will be Frank Barrieau, the same one whose name was mentioned two years ago whenever the first rate middleweights were discussed. Barrieau was at that time invincible among the four rounders and he is now confident of a comeback.

"Red" Dolan, who recently met defeat for the first time in several weeks at the hands of one Danny Kramer, figures to furnish sufficient excitement in the semi-windup when he goes against Solly Seaman, a New York lightweight who is breaking into western four-round circles with a high-powered reputation in Gotham. Other bouts scheduled for tonight's show will include: Frankie Novey vs. Tommie Curry, Johnny Jordan vs. Benny Kilroy, Ernest Owens vs. Jack Barnes, Jimmy Moyer vs. George Sirey, Packy Flynn vs. Young Jackson.

The Los Angeles cripples yesterday completed a perfect week against Ivan Howard's Acorns by taking the final game, 4 to 1, sewing up the series by a 5 to 2 margin. The game was a pitchers' battle until the last of the eighth, when Kremer weakened and the Seraphic sluggers proceeded to romp across the platter with three runs. Long Tom Hughes, who has a good day every now and then, dished 'em up for Wade Killefer's crew, allowing Oakland but six scattered hits. The Angels are still in the pennant race, although their chance is nothing which should cause any considerable amount of excitement. They are now four games behind Vernon and nine contests to the rear of the leading San Francisco Seals, showing a gain of a couple of games within the last two weeks. Their task is a difficult one, but stranger things than that have happened.

Both San Francisco and Salt Lake continue to wield the old bludgeon for team averages above the coveted .300 mark, the Seals holding down the lead with .305 and Salt Lake in the runner-up position with .303. Vernon and Los Angeles hold down the next two places, respectively, their averages being given at .292 and .287. They are followed in the standings by Portland, .286; Seattle, .281; Oakland, .277; Sacramento, .273.

In the individual averages Paul Strand, Salt Lake's hard-hitting infielder-outfielder, continues to lead the procession, being far ahead of the rest of the field with a mark of .393. Sammy Hale, the mainstay of the Portland machine, holds down second place fifteen points below Strand with .378. Duffy Lewis, Salt Lake's able-bodied manager, Red Smith, Bill Essick's fighting third-sacker, and "Sandow" Griggs, Angel pill mauler, are in fourth, fifth and sixth places with averages of .373, .363 and .362. Charlie Deal is the next Angel name to appear in the list, he being tied with Joe Kelly of the Seals with .346.

AMERICA'S BRITISH CHAMP TO DEFEND HIS PROFESSIONAL TITLE

By WOOD COWAN

BOBBY JONES CLAIMS THAT HAGEN WOULD BE A GREAT GOLFER IF HE SPENT AS MUCH TIME ON THE LINKS AS HE DOES IN FRONT OF A MIRROR

WESTERN OPEN CHAMP WHO DEFENDS HIS TITLE THIS WEEK AT DETROIT. HAGEN ALSO HOLDS THE BRITISH OPEN TITLE
IN THE OPEN AT SKOKIE. JONES AND HAGEN WERE PAIRED AND SOME GOOD NATURED KIDDING WENT ON BETWEEN THE TWO WOOD COWAN

Walter Hagen defends his Western Open Title at Detroit this week. And the man who takes it away from him will have to shoot some golf for Hagen is on his home grounds and at the top of his game.

It was way back in 1914 that Hagen first became a factor in golf. That year he beat "Chick" Evans by a single stroke and won the "open" at Midlothian. Since that time the word "golf" and Hagen have marched hand in hand at most every tournament of importance the world over. This summer he won the distinction of being the first home-bred professional to turn the trick of winning the British "open." As a matter of fact, few tournaments in which he competes find his name below the first five in the final score.

The Detroit "pro" has a world of confidence and nerve to burn, and he is at his best in match play. A gallery is like wine to Walter. He can make shots and play closer to top form when there is a crowd around than at any other time.

Hagen is a bold, aggressive player, going after everything in a determined manner. He is an exceptionally long driver and his iron shots carry past the best of them. And he is the best putter in professional ranks. Possessing a powerful pair of wrists, his forearm strokes tear into the ball with terrific force, getting fine distance from a heavy lie.

Walter will win more golf matches on his nerve than any other item in his game. His golden smile and ability to "kid" carry him through many a tight place.

A close student of the game, Hagen's opinion is that "golf strain" is probably greater than in any other sport, with the possible exception of billiards. "I have played all games," he says, "and am good at most of them, but for nervous strain, golf gets the call! The action is not continuous like baseball, boxing or tennis, and the golfer who miscues has considerable time to worry and unsteady himself before making the next strike. Spectators at a match see many hazards on the links but none can see the chief one of all—the player's nerves."

Hagen is an immaculate dresser, a big fellow possessing a magnetic personality and always wears the smile that wins.

Dempsey to Visit Mother on Coast

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Jack Dempsey with nothing much to do right now since his scheduled 10-round bout with Bill Brennan at Michigan City, Ind., on Labor day, was stopped by Governor McCray, will leave this city tonight for Los Angeles with Johnny Dempsey and Joe Benjamin, brother and sparring partner, respectively.

Jack will visit his mother and friends on the coast and will then hop back here to see what Jack Kearns, his manager, has cooked up in the line of unfinished business." 'Tis said Dempsey may meet Brennan Labor day in Buffalo, but a meeting with Harry Wills, the colored champion, will not come up until next year. An eastern battle with Harry Greb and a meeting with Tommy Gibbons also loom on Dempsey's horizon.

These junior farmers owned 76,148 head of farm animals and 554,286 fowls, representing a total value of $3,605,176.

The WORLD OVER

By FRANKLIN B. MORSE
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

One of the popular pastimes of the moment seems to be the signing up of divers boxers to meet Jack Dempsey. More scraps of paper.

There are a lot of golfers who would be glad to have the status of Gix Von Elm, the Salt Lake City golfer, cleared up. Whatever he may be, amateur of professional, von Elm is too prominent a figure to be statusless.

It is just twenty-five years ago this month that old Bob Fitzsimmons received a challenge from Billy Madden in behalf of Gus Ruhlin for a crack at the world's heavyweight championship. To a lot of old timers it doesn't seem possible that a quarter of a century could slip by so fast.

It is more than likely that no one figured Spain would render so good an account of herself in the Davis Cup preliminary match.

Whether or not the auto is displacing the horse there is no question that raising horses is a profitable occupation, judging from the prices that are being paid for thoroughbreds. When a bit of horse flesh will bring more than a hundred thousand dollars it looks as if the market was a good one for the seller.

Eddie Graney, well known referee of big prize fights, is conspicuous in the news of the papers of California, who are opposed to the candidacy of Hiram Johnson for senator. Graney is being held up as a sample of the "gang" that is for Johnson. Eddie probably is getting as much fun out of it as anybody.

The Sport Crucible

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Some misguided persons are making a belated and foolhardy attempt to whitewash Phil Douglas in the eyes of the baseball public. A petition, so they say, is to be circulated at the Polo grounds, asking the following question:

"Do you believe Phil Douglas should be reinstated?"

That question, if ever propounded, should go down as something of a near classic of the burlesque circuit.

The career of Phil Douglas, once and for all, is dead. It is dead by its own hand and somehow the corpse of a suicide is less presentable to the eye than any other. It seems like an affront to good taste to have it hanging around so long.

This writer has nothing against Phil Douglas. Indeed, few confessed derelicts have been given the benefit of greater sympathy and the writer is one of those who feels that it was all a mistake on Phil's part. But he cannot come back to baseball any more than a self-confessed absconder can be returned to his desk at the bank.

The reasons for this are obvious. First of all, it would set a deplorable precedent. Again, there is no assurance that Douglas would not do something worse provided his habits are incurable, as alleged. Furthermore, the fans of the country, so say nothing of seven other National league clubs, would not stand for the Giants, already in bad favor, winning a pennant with a discredited pitcher.

Jail Sentence for Lengthening Years

LONDON.—Horatio Bottomley, former British publicist, member of parliament and writer of numerous anti-American articles, is languishing in jail as the result of conviction on charges of fraudulent conversion of club funds for his own uses, but he will gain three years of life by virtue of his prison sentence, according to prison physicians.

Bottomley is sentenced to seven years in prison, but the prison physicians say they can add ten years to the length of the prisoner's life by reason of prison diet, and thus Bottomley will gain three years by his confinement, if the prison physicians are accurate.

Bottomley was known as a high liver in London and luxuriated in champagne and such. Now that he is in prison and is able to have none of these luxuries of high life and must take certain exercises every day it is predicted that he will live to leave prison walls behind him and again figure in the public life of Great Britain.

Tagging All Bases

Being ill-advised enough to lose in Philadelphia while the Yanks were lying idle in New York, the Browns slipped another half game to the rear in the American league scramble. Williams carried his hitting streak to twenty-five games with a pair of singles.

Earl Hamilton made the Braves look quite ill, indeed, until the ninth when three hits scored Boston's only run. This, however, didn't prevent the Pirates from winning, 7 to 1.

W. Collins, Fullerton, Quinn and Russell were given the strong arm treatment by the Tigers who treated one and all impartially to win, 16 to 3.

Star Actors Will Face Wage Cut Soon

NEW YORK—With the consent of the Equity association, actors face a big cut soon in the large salaries they have been receiving. Last season various producers let it be understood that they would take such a step, but each seemed waiting for the other to begin, and salaries remained just as high. Now A. H. Woods has led the way in asking the players he is engaging for his fall productions to take a cut, and indications were today that other managers would offer decreased pay next season. The cuts may run as high as 30 per cent.

Woods adopted the unusual expedient of making an appeal to the general body of players, through the Actors' Equity Association, to accept a reduction. His plea ran in part as follows:

"I have brought back about thirty plays from Europe. I should like to do a great many of them, which would be of advantage to Equity as well as to me, but I can't do many of them if the prevailing salaries continue.

"There is no evading this fact—the salaries of actors are too high for present conditions. They are coming down, because a force stronger than Equity or the Producing Managers' association is going to bring them down. It's an economic law. If they don't come down there is going to be a very lean winter ahead for the actor. I say this as a friend, not as an opponent, of Equity."

The Equity expresses official approval of the stand, with the suggestion that "probably the best solution would be for the actor to take a smaller salary and percentage over a certain amount." Mr. Woods, however, expressed that such a system would be applicable only to stars.

GLENDALE STYLE SHOW GORGEOUS

Peggy Hamilton Compliments Merchants on Fashionable Wear to Be Shown

Peggy Hamilton's "Fashions, Fads and Fancies of the Fall of 1922," will be originally portrayed by the famous designer in the Pageant of Fall Fashions at the T. D. and L. theatre Thursday of this week.

It will be the most gorgeous array of wearing apparel ever displayed in a city the size of Glendale, according to an announcement made yesterday by Miss Hamilton as she was "resting" between acts of one of her rehearsals.

The "woman's fashion plate of the west," as Miss Hamilton is known to many, is one of Glendale's most enthusiastic boosters. She has become strongly attached to the community in the brief space of time she has been a resident here.

In selecting the garments which are to be shown in the revue, Miss Hamilton expressed a feeling of an agreeable surprise in finding the goods of local merchants "fully as smart, modish and fashionable as can be found anywhere in Southern California."

Beautiful Women Models

The exhibit, which will include the "Peggy Hamilton" method of displaying stylish garments on ten of the Southland's most beautiful and experienced models, is to be presented by McGillis-Miles, Enterprisers, a local concern, in connection with the regular Thursday T. D. and L. program. The feature picture for the show will be Jack London's famous, "Dangerous Lies." No additional admission charge will be made over the usual theatre prices.

As specialty numbers to be presented with the pageant McGillis-Miles have obtained the services of five well known Southern California vaudeville stars. They will include: Lillian Guenther, Ted Shawn's dainty little dancer; Vivian Ingraham, known as "Peggy Hamilton's Songbird"; Nancy & Gene Walters, novelty act; Patricia Pfeiffer, toe dancer de luxe, and Bill Bode's "Triumphant Trio."

Attractive Settings

The beautiful settings for the three performances will be furnished by the Trice Furniture company and the Glendale Music company. These two leading firms have gladly volunteered to make the show the most elaborate and goregous event of its kind ever staged in Glendale. The Glendale Florist company will supply all flowers and greenery for the scenes.

Inside Facts for Women Only

The first performance of the day will be the special "ladies only" lingerie matinee to take place at 3:30 o'clock, when Peggy will conduct one of her famous "informal parties," in which she tells and demonstrates the correct way for the fitting and wearing of undergarments. The displays will be worn during Miss Hamilton's lecture by the models, who will walk down between the aisles for the audience's inspection.

Further announcement regarding "Glendale's greatest attraction will be made within the next two days.

The merchants who will participate in the exhibit will be Josephine Des Mazes, I. B. Carlock, Glendale Dry Goods company, Hatz, LaFacile Corset Shop, Ed Nisle, Robinson's Men's Shop, Sherrod's Specialty Shop and the Harriet Wilson Shoppe.

Prohibition Topic of Flying Squadron

James H. Wortendyke was the speaker at the Flying Squadron rally in the Citizens' bulding auditorium last night. Mr. Wortendyke is from Kansas and is a constitutional lawyer. His topic last night was "The Prohibition Amendment—Is It Permanent?" He said: "This is the general belief because it is in the constitution." He then showed by historical facts that without enforcing laws it would be a dead letter.

Mr. Wortendyke said in part: "It largely depends upon the attitude of congress as to whether any amendment becomes effective or not. The liquor interests were never more effectively organized and financed than at the present time. There are thirty-three organizations fully equipped and working to use the light wine and beer amendment as a wedge to split open the constitution and eventually bring back the liquor traffic with all its evils. It is in the hands of congress to amend, modify, change or repeal the Volstead law, and thereby break down the eighteenth amendment.

"The flying squadron is in the field to assist in abetting not only dry men but the ablest and most efficient. They will help to return Volstead in Minnesota, to defeat Governor Edwards, the wet candidate for United States senator in New Jersey."

Oliver W. Stewart, who was elected to the Illinois legislature from Chicago on the prohibition issue will be the principal speaker at tonight's meeting. He is considered one of the greatest authorities on this subject today. Miss Norma C. Brown, an ordained minister of the Christian church, is the other speaker.

WOMEN WANT WINE?

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 22.—Secretary of War Weeks said this afternoon that a prohibition poll taken by a New York magazine had borne out his previously expressed opinion that the country wanted beer and light wines. He was impressed, Weeks declared, by the number of women who were in favor of liberalizing the Volstead act.

Why Congress Protects War Grafters

An Open Letter from MR. RANDALL to MR. LINEBERGER

Dear Mr. Lineberger:

On the 14th day of May of this year, a vote was taken in the House of Representatives on the Woodruff-Johnson resolution proposing an investigation of the gigantic stealings of war grafters who had contracts with the government during the world war. The resolution was put to sleep by the close vote of 149 to 114, although it had been recommended for adoption by the republican members of the Committee on Rules. Your vote was cast with the 149 to chloroform the investigation.

Here is the issue which you must meet in the ninth district Congressional race, and I propose you shall meet it, if not before the primary, then before election day in November. Every voter will know the truth.

I do not charge you with friendship toward war grafters nor do I think you would give a direct vote to protect them in holding their ill-gotten gains.

What I do charge is that you are so closely allied with the "Old Guard" of your party in Congress that when it cracked the whip and demanded defeat of the Woodruff-Johnson resolution, you took orders and voted that way.

Woodruff and Johnson are both republicans, and both were your comrades in the great war. They writhed under the failure and refusal of the Attorney General of the United States to prosecute these cases, when evidence was in hand and the United States district attorneys in at least two cases announced they were ready to proceed. These cases were in Michigan and Massachusetts. In the former case Senator Newberry was incensed at the very prospect of having his war grafter friends tried in court. In the Massachusetts case, Secretary of War Weeks was closely involved as a member of a law firm which had profited in the graft of millions. These men protested to Attorney General Daugherty against proceeding in these cases, although close to a billion dollars' loss to the government was involved.

And the Attorney General of these United States actually sent a telegram to the U. S. Attorneys in the cases not to act!

This was the basis of the efforts of Woodruff and Johnson, republican members of Congress and veterans of the world war, to force action by their own administration to do its duty.

Their resolution was introduced on April 11th. It proposed that Congress "Fully investigate all contracts and expenditures made by the War Department and the Alien Property Custodian during and since the late war with Germany, and the settlement of any of such contracts by any officer or agent or department of the Government arising out of such contracts, or the settlement thereof, and to investigate the civil and criminal prosecution or lack of prosecution, of any or all of the claims of the government arising out of such contracts or the settlement thereof, by the Attorney General, the Alien Property Custodian, the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy," and the resolution gave Congress full power to act by summoning all witnesses, secure all papers and contracts and to administer oaths and take full testimony.

This resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules of which Congressman Phil Campbell of Kansas is chairman. The committee on May 3 gave approval to the resolution and ordered that it be reported to the house for passage.

Then the "Old Guard" got busy, and the grafters' lobby became active.

Campbell put the resolution in his pocket and kept it there. He refused to present it to the House.

Every day Johnson and Woodruff demanded action on the resolution. Every parliamentary trick known to Congress was employed by the reactionary leaders to prevent a vote. The House even went to the extreme lengths of adjournment to escape going on record. The young giants, Woodruff and Johnson, heroes of some of the fiercest battles of the great war, would not give up. The country was aroused. Finally the "Old Guard" in desperation appealed to the hard-boiled, frozen faced reactionary, stand-pat speaker for help. He promised it. The fateful day came. Johnson and Woodruff made the daily demand for action, and the speaker recognized them. He allowed them to present their case in the open house. And then—he ruled—yes, he ruled—that Campbell could keep the resolution in his pocket.

Shades of departed Kings, Kaisers and Monarchies! Can you beat it?

Then Johnson and Woodruff inured to poison gas and shell shock, appealed from the decision of the chair. They did. And the vote was on sustaining the ruling of the millionaire mossback who is the speaker. The chair was sustained by the close squeak of 149 to 114, although the republicans have more than 150 majority in the House.

Your vote, Mr. Lineberger, was among the 149.

Phil Campbell has already received his just reward at the hands of his Kansas constituents. They have retired him to private life.

You, Mr. Lineberger, make the excuse that you did not want to criticise Attorney General Daugherty by voting for the resolution, and you palliate your action by voting for another resolution giving him $500,000 out of the Treasury to prosecute war grafters in the hope that will cause him to proceed.

Well, let's see about Attorney General Daugherty. Almost under the shadow of your palatial home in Long Beach, Mr. Lineberger, there lives in a modest home, a lonely woman. Her face is seamed with lines of sorrow and her hair is turning white. Her only companion is a sturdy son who has steady employment and keeps his mother in what comfort is possible. A sweet young woman, the only daughter of this lonely woman, was killed in a terrible automobile accident a year ago, while on an eastern visit. The husband and father was sent to the Leavenworth penitentiary to serve a long term, some years ago. I knew these people long ago in a central western state. My father was the pastor of the parents of this man and woman. Their families were honored, respected and loved by everybody in the community. The young man who went to the penitentiary in later years secured a position in the local bank. He rose rapidly until he became cashier. Then along came a lawyer and financier by the name of Thos. H. Matters. He bought the controlling interest in the bank and became its president. This man was a plunger and gambler in stocks. He loaned the funds of the bank to his own enterprises. Under his orders his cashier became a party to the crime against the banking laws. Both were tried and convicted. The young cashier, having no friends of influence, went to the penitentiary to serve his term. Not so with Matters. He had powerful connections financially and politically. He allowed his cashier to go to the pen, but he went to the higher courts. His guilt was confirmed by all the courts, but still he was a free man. No jails opened for him. He appealed finally to President Woodrow Wilson for a pardon and it was denied. Then the new administration came with Attorney General Daugherty at the helm. Again Matters went to Washington and appealed to Daugherty for clemency, not for his cashier, but for himself. Daugherty told him he could not recommend a pardon until he had served at least a portion of his sentence. It wouldn't look well! So Matters rushed back to his home town and announced in the newspapers he would serve his sentence. He boarded a train for Leavenworth, not permitting a bailiff or court officer to accompany him to the penitentiary. At Leavenworth he began his long sentence. It lasted exactly 44 days when a full pardon came from Daugherty.

The poor young bank clerk went on with his punishment, the lonely woman in the shadow of your mansion, Mr. Lineberger, cries herself to sleep, and the world of politics continues to grind out injustice.

This is not all of Daugherty. A decade ago, Charles W. Morse wrecked a bank in New York City. It carried the deposits and life savings of thousands of poor people. When the bank failed—hundreds lost all. It has been said that one hundred and fifteen suicides and deaths by shock and illness of aged people was a direct result of the wrecking of this bank by Morse. He was sentenced to a long term in the Atlanta penitentiary. Soon the papers began to carry stories of Morse's serious illness in the penitentiary. A black-leg lawyer in Georgia by the name of Thomas B. Felder was secretly engaged by Morse to secure his release. This was Felder's particular line of business. He was adept at it. In the Morse case he exercised his usual discretion and adroitness. He looked up Harry M. Daugherty of Ohio, and contracted with him for a fee of $25,000 to secure Morse's release. Morse became rapidly worse. The papers said he could live only a few days. President Taft, who hailed also from Ohio, believed the stories, and pardoned him. The next day Morse sailed for Europe, returned in three months and began life over again as well as ever. He was one of the war's numerous grafters and is now under indictment by the grand jury in New York. Whether the same Harry M. Daugherty of Ohio, who secured Morse's release from Atlanta penitentiary, and who is now Attorney General of the United States, will ever find time to prosecute him is problematical.

These facts and many more were known to you, Mr. Lineberger, when you cast your tender-hearted vote to protect the feelings of Attorney General Daugherty. I submit, however, the suggestion that the voters of the Ninth Congressional District are more interested in seeing absolute justice done than they are in the feelings of a man like Attorney General Daugherty.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES H. RANDALL.

GLENDALE WIDELY ADVERTISED BY C. OF C.

Immense Volume of Letter Mail Required to Reply to Daily Inquiries

One thousand pieces of letter mail each month is the average output of the secretarial and clerical force of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce in maintaining that important, but little-thought-about duty of keeping informed about Glendale the people who write and ask for specific or general information concerning the city, its industries and attractions, and its future.

Direct inquiries about Glendale receved by the Chamber numbers upwards of 100 weekly, Secretary Rhoades states, while circulars to an equal number are mailed out through indirect request. This is all in addition to correspondence with members, letters to and from firms on Chamber business, and subjects other than "publicity" maling matter.

Secretary Rhoades mails out a goodly number of copies of The Glendale Evening News also on request for copies of local papers. He is careful always to pick for mailing issues that are particularly illustrative of the city's progress.

When inquirers ask for the names of grocers, realty dealers, doctors or blacksmiths, the Chamber replies by sending a list of all those of that business or profession who are members of the Chamber. This is one of the minor benefits of membership, Secretary Rhoades explains.

Other routine activities little realized by the people who stay at home include the distribution of thousands of circulars and pamphlets of attractive makeup in the hotels, waiting rooms, railway offices and other places of public gathering throughout the nation. Recently Mr. John Huntley of Glendale, who is in the Pacific northwest, informed President V. M. Hollister of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce that Glendale literature is to be found prominently displayed throughout the northwest in most of the best hotels and in the railway waiting rooms. Mr. Huntley complimented the Chamber upon the "wide distribution" of Glendale literature of an attractive nature in the country he is traveling.

TOLEDO, O.—Charles Covert, Cincinntai, on his way home from Philadelphia to pay off his mother's mortgage, stopped in Toledo long enough to permit a stranger to give him a drink.

When he awoke in Central station, where he had been taken after he was found unconscious in an empty lot, his roll of $300 had been depleted to $27.

Covert told police he had been working as a waiter in Philadelphia nine months, depriving himself of clothes and even food in order that he might save every cent possible to pay on the mortgage on his mother's home in Cincinnati.

MISS STURGES AND RALPH DRAKE WEDDED

Bride's Home Is Scene of Ceremony Followed by Pretty Reception

The wedding of Miss Hazeldell Sturges and Ralph Drake, of Phoenix, Ariz., was solemnized at 8 o'clock last night, Monday, August 1, 1922, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Sturges, 310 North Cedar street, with Rev. E. C. Boger of College Place, Washington, officiating. The living room of the Sturges home had been attractively decorated for the occasion with pink and white carnations and with asters.

Preceding the ceremony, and as the bridal party entered the room a quartette played the wedding march from "Lohengrin," with Professor G. P. Miller at the piano, and Professor A. C. Walgamott, H. F. Kreutzenstein and Harold Sturges playing violins. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white silk crepe-de chine trimmed with crepe satin and a silk net veil and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Her sister, Miss Marguerite Sturges, was the bridesmaid, wearing a frock of pink organdie and carrying a bouquet of pink rosebuds. Dr. J. P. Martensen of Los Angeles was best man. After the ceremony, the quartette played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

Informal Reception Follows

During an informal reception which followed a short program was given, including readings by Miss Zella Green, vocal selections by Mrs. William Worster and Miss Edith Thompson, and whistling solos by A. Babianco. Refreshments were served, including the wedding cake.

Typists Paid Less Than Housemaids In French Capital

PARIS—Maids of all work are better paid in France than stenographers, points out La Presse, summing up an analysis of women's wages.

It isn't that the French "bonne" gets much money for her long days of hard work. It is that money is not worth so much these days as food and lodging, which a reasonable amount of money no longer will buy.

A French stenographer earns, after about a year as a "debutante"—the word is strange to American ears used in this sense—about $50 a month, out of which she must pay, according to La Presse, $12 for a room, $27 for food, $5 for clothes, $1.50 for carfare, $2 for heat, $1.50 for laundry and incidental expenses, $2. The total, pitifully little even from French standards, amounts nevertheless to more than the amount received, or $55.

The "servant girl," on the other hand, continues La Presse, is paid at least $17 a month, with board, room and laundry free. Grant her $7 for maintenance and incidentals, and she is left with $10 a month saved.

"Only prejudice keeps girls from housework nowadays," concludes the article.

Both servant girls and stenographers say, however, that only circumstances and immigration difficulties keep them from America.

LINEBERGER GIVES ACCOUNTING TO CONSTITUENCY

him. I want you people to tell the women what his wife did. She placed particular emphasis on the "open arms" with which Mrs. Harding received the ladies of Washington and told of the beautiful flowers to be seen at the White House functions.

This latter remark was due to the profusion of dahlias and other blooms provided for the banquet last night by W. L. Twining. Judge E. H. Hahn and Attorney Reuben Smith also were introduced prior to the congressman's address.

Mr. Lineberger said in part:

Congressman's Speech

"It is a pleasure to be back in Glendale. When I went forth to Washington I had many moments for reflection and I assure you my mind often traveled back to Glendale and what it meant to me and what it meant to have such a progressive and high type of citizenship to represent.

"True, I have been away for a year and a half, but I have not been removed from your interests, for in Washington I have kept in correspondence with you and by visits of your citizens I have kept abreast of the wonderful growth and the sentiments of the people of Glendale, because, friends, after all, a representative in congress must be able to know and interpret and give truthful expression for those who have sent him as their spokesman.

His Stand Is Known

"Whatever success I have made has not been due to my efforts, but that I went forth representing in the field of national politics certain definite well-defined principles.

"The people in Washington knew on my arrival that I had been sent forth as a Republican; they were glad to see me because of that fact and that I would give my views in harmony and in coordination with the party in power in Washington today, carrying on the work of the business of this great nation.

"The work in congress is nothing more nor less than a business proposition. The men there expect a man to be sincere, well balanced and true to the principles for which he stands.

"The house of representatives is made up of many men from many walks of life. When a new member arrives they begin to size him up. When the mass decision of that body finally is passed on a man it comes very nearly being his true measure.

"I have come to the definite conclusion that what we need is not a radical departure, but a readaptation of old time principles to suit modern conditions and to move and work along progressive lines.

"However, I find the sincerest men in congress often have great divergencies of opinion. We have to learn to be tolerant with the other fellow and learn that he is just as sincere as we are. Service is congress makes a man a little more charmed with his fellow man and with his colleagues.

"I have been a greenhorn in congress and have many things to learn, but I shall ever have in mind the idea you have of me—to progress along certain definite lines defined by the great principles of the party of which I am a member."

Tells of Work

The speaker then diverged to tell of the work of the house, stating:

"The house is composed of forty committees, ten of which are of major national importance, the members having to devote their entire time to the work of these committees. Out of eleven congressmen from California, ten are members of the major committees, some of the older members being chairmen," said Mr. Lineberger, pointing to Julius Kahn, chairman of the military affairs committee; John I. Nolan, chairman of te labor committee, and James Curry, chairman of the territorial committee as examples, while he is a member of the rivers and harbors committee, a most important group.

"Other members recognize California and have given us prominence that is out of proportion," the speaker added. "I was appointed to the foreign affairs committee and later to the rivers and harbors, and being the only civil engineer and the only member from west of the Rocky mountains, I hope to achieve something for my own section, all of California and the entire west coast."

Seeks Information

The congressman then expressed a desire to visit all of the coast cities and its harbors and rivers to be able to speak intelligently after having observed conditions first hand. He also spoke of his colleague, Henry Z. Osborne of Los Angeles and what he was doing on the most important appropriations committtee.

"I have determined I shan't try to bluff," said the congressman. "I propose to play the game of politics absolutely on the square. In all party matters I shall support the president of the United States and the policies for which the Republican party stands," the speaker said in explaining his four-square stand on certain issues.

Continuing that line of thought, he added: "The Republican party has had to take the bull by the horns and it has not been popular to increase taxes and cut down appropriations, but we are faced by a gigantic proposition in the readjustment of the world, and today we are the only nation on an even keel.

For America First

"Europe is a powder magazine and it behooves us to look after affairs at home. We have problems we must solve at home before going abroad and taking charge of affairs of others. However, I believe we should offer our advisory offices so that the other nations may set their houses right.

"We must bring the nations of Europe in line with the psychology of helping themselves, that up to this time have shown little apparent effort to do so."

Mr. Lineberger expressed the opinion that the western hemisphere has solved its problems for ten years to come in the Four Power pact, saying that California feels it has an insurance policy for ten years on the peace of this Pacific ocean.

Speaking of his campaign, the congressman said: "So long as I have to have opposition, it is just as well to have it from my principal opponent, for he is a perennial candidate."

In closing Mr. Lineberger expressed the wish that "I may so live that when I die the undertaker will be sorry, and my constituents will say, 'Well done my good and faithful servant.'"

HOME TOWN HEARS JONES' PLEA FOR GOVERNORSHIP

them who he is and what he is because they will believe you and vote for him.

Praises Candidate

"Mr. Jones has a reputation at the bar of being an absolutely square lawyer. After all, the only thing you have in this life is the reputation you make while living here. Money won't buy it. Some rich men in this state have tried it and failed. Mattison B. Jones has earned his reputation by his actions. He is a man who is a straight thinker and a straight doer. The people have a right to be proud of the man who is asking to be governor of this great state of California."

Mayor Spencer Robinson and "Eddie" Albright of 1912 Gardena avenue made their appearance at the conclusion of the short speech made by Mr. Hays and kept the audience in good-natured laughter for about twenty minutes while they told of the phenomenal success of the campaign trip through northern California. As proof that they had been on the job Mr. Albright played the organ they had used on their trip, while Mr. Robinson sang two of his well-known solos. Then while he was getting his legs tucked away under the organ, Mr. Albright made a short speech and then sang "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes."

Principles of his platform were outlined briefly by Mr. Jones, whose voice showed evidence of the over-exertion to which it has been put during the past few weeks.

Would Use Veto Whip

"I am absolutely convinced that the people of California are paying too high taxes," asserted Mr. Jones. "If I go to Sacramento, I shall feel that I go commissioned by the people of the state to stop this extravagance of spending the people's money."

Mr. Jones pledged himself to do all in his power to introduce business-like methods and efficiency in the state government. He said that he desired co-operation from the state legislators, but that, if they would not give it to him, he would not hesitate to use the veto power.

"I stand first, last and all the time for the constitution of the United States," declared Mr. Jones with reference to the Wright bill and the 18th amendment. "I am for the laws and the enforcement of laws."

Speaking of the number of interlapping state commissions, Mr. Jones said that he intended to attempt to reduce this number and make those remaining more efficient.

Raps Rail Commission

The state railroad commission will be invited to about face and serve the people of California for awhile instead of the corporations, according to Mr. Jones. He admitted that in order to bring this about it probably would be necessary for him to smash the political ring in control of state politics.

The meeting was called to order about 8:15 by Hugo Kirchofer of Hollywood, who led the audience in the singing of a number of campaign songs eulogizing Mr. Jones. The accompaniment was played on the piano by Mrs. L. N. Hagood of 216 North Orange street. Two piano selections were played by Richard Berry of 825 North Louise street. The first was the Allegro Movement from Beethoven's "Sonata Pathetique" and the second was "Love-Death" from Tristan and Isolde."

Mill Remnant Sale Draws Big Crowd

Pendroy's Mill Remnant sale specials drew one of the largest crowds ever attending a sale in Glendale this morning—hundreds of women waiting at the entrances to the store in order to get first chance at the bargains as soon as the doors opened. The sale will continue until Saturday, August 26.

BIG CROWD SEES LIFESAVERS IN ACTION HERE

and a capsized boat by the use of a life line in the hands of one rescuer was explained and shown by Mr. Killick. Six Boy Scouts, Clifford Walcott, Robert Hatch, Charles Kausen, Horace Brown, Floyd Craft and Elvin Richards, all of Troop No. 2, Glendale, assisted him in this and other events.

Following this, the noted lifesaver gave a demonstration under water, during which a spotlight loaned by the Monarch Auto Supply company of 121 South Brand boulevard, played upon the swimmers to good effect.

Can Rescue in Deep Water

Under water, Mr. Killick demonstrated how to secure the body of a drowned man, in any depth up to 60 feet. Below that, he stated, the pressure is so great that there is danger of the ear drums being broken. Various strokes for tired swimmers, by which they may keep afloat and moving with a minimum of effort, were shown.

Deep in the pool, under the glare of the searchlight, Mr. Killick and the Scouts demonstrated the breaks for a number of death grips which a drowning person often secures on his rescuer. These breaks, it was explained, are absolutely necessary to one who goes after a drowning person, who may grip his rescuer and cause the death of both.

A little girl, who had no practice in the feat, lowered a piece of light twine, weighted with a nail, to the bottom of the pool and unaided pulled to the surface Mr. Killick, who grasped the cord while at the bottom. The demonstration proved that a small child can save the life of a drowning adult with the aid of only a piece of string.

The last feat showed how exhausted swimmers may be brought in through breakers and undertow with the use of a lifeline. This and the other demonstrations were received with applause from the interested spectators. After the performance congratulations were tendered Mr. Killick and the Boy Scouts for the interesting and instructive program.

Chairs for the spectators were provided by the Jewel City Undertaking company, 202 North Brand, the Glendale Union High school and Glendale Troop No. 2.

Mr. Benner was pleased with the interest shown last night in Boy Scout activities, and is planning to make such public entertainments one of the regular activities of the Scouts.
